PREFATORY NOTE

SOME years ago, I began the work of genealogical research with a desire to make the memory of our ancestors more enduring, and with the hope of finding actual proof in regard to the families of Durand, Whalley, Barnes, and Yale.

I have found it not an easy task to reconcile apparently truthful statements, for surely the keeping of "records" was not a family gift, and in some cases I can only give traditions. I have endeavored to get historical facts by correspondence with town officials where records have been kept and by research in reference books, town histories, revolutionary records, family Bibles, church records, inscriptions on tombstones, family letters and word of mouth testimony when possible, and in many cases have been successful.

I greatly appreciate the kindness of all who have in any way contributed information, and I am grateful to those of the immediate family who have encouraged me by showing their interest in the undertaking.

To Mr. R. H. Yale I am greatly indebted for much of the history of the Yales, ancient and modern. At the Newberry Library, Chicago, I have been most ably assisted in research work by Mrs. Harriet Taylor, the efficient librarian of the Genealogical Department.

In compiling these records, I would add that this labor of love was undertaken and so far completed in the hope that it may be useful and of interest, especially to the younger generations. Other chapters wait to be written of events past, present and future, and it should be a point of honor with the younger generations as they come to bear their part in developing the history of their ancestors, in recording the events of their "present," and in verifying the traditions "which we have heard and known and our fathers have told us."

FRANCES BAILEY HEWITT.

LAKE FOREST, ILLINOIS., December, 1911.

"Those who do not treasure up the memory of their ancestors do not deserve to be remembered by posterity."—SIR EDMUND BURKE.

"The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: Thine eyes are upon me, and I am not."—Job vii. 8.

"Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations: ask thy father, and he will show thee: thy elders, and they will tell thee."—Deut. xxxii. 7.

"Aye thus it is! One generation comes,
Another goes and mingles with the dust
And thus we come and go and come and go—
Each for a little moment, filling up some little space
And then we disappear
In quick succession, and it shall be so
Till time in one vast perpetuity
Be swallowed up."

"Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

"For he established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children:

"That the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born; who should arise, and declare them to their children."—Psalms lxxviii. 3, 5, 6.

Governor Hopkins was the founder of the grammar school at New Haven, Conn. He gave in his will 1000 pounds for the support of grammar schools in Hartford and New Haven; also 500 pounds to Harvard College, and the grammar school of Cambridge. He died in London, March, 1657, aged about 58 years. Ann Yale Hopkins, his wife, died December 14, 1698, aged 83 years, at Plas Grano, near Wrexham, Wales.

PART II. HISTORICAL PARAGRAPHS

HISTORICAL PARAGRAPHS

Besançon, France—Besançon is one of the oldest towns of France. The town was the capital of the department of Doubs in the old province Franche-Comté, bounded on the east by Switzerland. The town is situated on the Doubs River, which rises in the Jura Mountains. Besançon presents many attractions. It abounds in remains of the Roman occupation of Gaul. It was at Besançon that the cross suspended in the heavens, bearing the legend “in hoc signo vinces,” appeared to the Roman emperor Constantine as he made his triumphant invasion of the country. A vast Roman amphitheatre has recently been excavated there. It is a walled town. One object of great interest is the ancient palace of Cardinal Granville, once Archbishop of Besançon. Victor Hugo was born in Besançon. The valley of the Doubs, in which the town is situated, is very beautiful, with its swift river of clear, cold water coming from the mountains. The valley was a scene of husbandry, with fields and vineyards containing luscious fruit, and the “fleur-de-lis” was the flower of the valley.

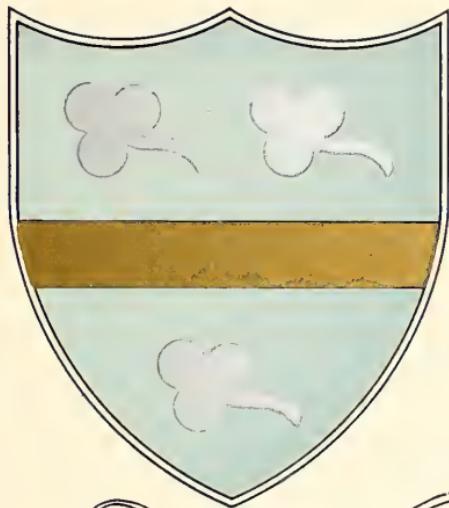

The Name Durand—Durant, Durand, Durrant. An ancient personal name, in Latin Durandus, under which form it occurs in Domesday. An early Norman proprietor of this name founded Duranville, called in charters Durand's Villa, near Bernai, in or before the eleventh century. The name of the immortal author of the Inferno was by baptism Durante—afterward shortened by his familiar friends into Dante.

Crests are designated by suitable emblems to exhibit the achievements of valor, the descent of hereditary honors, and the distinctions appertaining to nobility. A right to bear arms was the true criterion of nobility.

François Joseph Durand (I D a)—The earliest record of the Durand line who settled in America was of François Joseph Durand, who we are told was the son of a nobleman, resident in Besançon, in the east of France.

François Joseph Durand ran away from his home in France, came to America about 1755, first stopping in the West Indies. He finally settled in Norwalk, Connecticut, and there married Patience Weed. They had five sons and three daughters. He told his children that he was heir to a large estate in France, and if it was ever necessary to prove his identity, that his skull had been trepanned before leaving France, and a silver piece inserted. One tradition is that he came from France some time between 1755 and 1759, that he was about sixteen years of age when he left home and that he enlisted on board of a French ship-of-war. His father came on the dock, after the ship had cast her lines, just too late to get his boy. At one time he started to go to France to claim his inheritance, but on reaching New York found that the boat that he was expecting to take had gone, and as some time would elapse before another boat would sail, he returned to his home.

The name Joseph Durand seems to be the one he used after coming to America. From the New Canaan, Connecticut, town records, we find that Joseph Durand married Patience Weed, December 22, 1762. In Bailey's "Connecticut Marriages," volume 4, page 23, Newberry Library, "Joseph Durand married Patience Weed (2) December 22, 1762." The Congregational Church of New Canaan was organized in 1733 from the churches of Norwalk and New Canaan.

In the land records of Norwalk, Connecticut, there appears the name of Joseph Durand. He was a property-holder and bought and sold land.

Of Patience Weed Durand (2) I would be glad to record more than the notice of her marriage with Joseph Durand. The story of their five sons and three daughters is told in part, and in bringing her name down to the memory of the living, we can only read between the lines, and believe her to have been a mother filled with piety and good works.

There are various stories told of François Joseph—one is, that in 1801, he started for France to establish his inheritance claim, which could have been done at that time, but he was obliged to return home on account of ill health, and the time soon expired in which it was possible for the heirs to establish a legal claim.

Another story is told of a Frenchman, whose name was Durand, who came to America in 1858 or 1859, to find the heirs of François Joseph, saying that he and his sister were heirs also, and they could not get their share unless the heirs of François Joseph were found. They came to Wakeman, Ohio, talked with Merari (6 b), a member of the family of François Joseph Durand. They had much to say about a General Durand.

François Joseph died in June, 1817 or 1818, at the home of his son, Alexandre Durand (4 D b), in Charlotte, Vermont, and was buried there.

A letter from Mrs. A. J. Durand (23) Elizabethtown, N. Y., says that "Many years ago, when something was being done to get the fortune, François Joseph's body, which was buried in Charlotte, Vermont, was taken up, the piece of silver found (which he had told his children of), and the remains buried in another place. This must have been done by the family of one of his daughters." Martha Durand Fuller (185 d), daughter of George Durand (39 c), tells us that at one time Seneca Durand (36 c), Milo Durand (12 c), and some others searched for the body of François Joseph in the cemetery at Charlotte, but could not find the remains. She well remembers hearing the family say that while François Joseph was living with his son Alexandre (4 D b), in Charlotte, he at first was discontented with his surroundings, knowing of his beautiful home in France, his own country, for which he longed, but that in the later years of his life he became more reconciled. He was remembered by those who knew him as somewhat small in stature, but a genuine Frenchman in politeness. He was polished, courteous and scholarly.

It is a matter for regret that substantial proof of the story of his life in his home in France, and also personal records of his parents, cannot be given. Diligent search has been made, but the written story has not yet been found. In times past, word of mouth communication is said to have had a real value, and was thought to be secure in the truth, and so could be handed down to posterity, without a thought of its being questioned.

It was with delight that I listened to the story of François Joseph Durand, as told me by my grandfather, Calvin Durand (33 D c), when I was a child, and often repeated when I was older. To my childish ears it was like a romance, and there never was a thought that the story would ever have to be verified, "but the spirit of the present times demands authorities for everything."

JOSEPH FRANCIS DURAND

John M. Durand, Jr. (87 e), writing from Besançon, France, January 10, 1898, says in part as follows:

"I have been busy searching the records here for the past two days, for the name of François Joseph Durand, supposed to have been born in 1740, but as yet have been unsuccessful. Have found the record of François Victor Durand, born in 1733, son of Charles Durand, and apparently corrected later by another hand, to Charles Mainboeuf Durand. I also called on Mr. Hector Durand de Gevigney to get what information I could from him. They are the only surviving noble family living here, and changed to de Gevigney, female line, to distinguish themselves from the other branches.

"There were, originally, two noble families, Antoine Joseph Durand, married in 1685, and Charles Emanuel Durand, married in 1698. The descendants of the first family still exist, and I have been looking over their family records with them. The records of the Charles Emanuel Durand family have mysteriously disappeared, abruptly breaking off all chance of discovering their descendants. The two families were originally one, and came from Baumeles-Dames, near here, early in 1600, as near as I can judge. Right after the marriage of Charles Emanuel Durand, in 1698, the book containing the record of descendants was destroyed, which seems to me very strange, but they say it must have been done during the time of the first French Revolution. If we descended from Charles Emanuel's branch, why, François Joseph must have been a grandson of the same."

Joseph Francis Durand (3 b), son of François Joseph, brother of Alexandre, was an early settler in Elizabethtown, N. Y. He was of French descent, and is said to have been directly connected with the nobility. He is remembered as a man who was much liked and respected by all who knew him. One of his sons, Milo, left a large family, of whom Alonzo M. (14 d) and Alembert J. (18 d) are still (1890) residents of the town. Joseph Francis Durand served in the Revolutionary War.

Alexandre Durand (4 D b) married Elizabeth Whalley (28 W b). They lived in Norwalk, Connecticut, and removed to Charlotte, Vermont, where they resided the remainder of their lives. The old “Homestead,” in the east part of the town, is still standing.

Elizabeth Whalley Durand, after the death of her husband (1836), lived for a while at the “Homestead,” with her son Alanson (32 c). From there she went to live with her son George (39 c), at his home in Charlotte, and then returned to her old home. From the church record, we find that she united with the Congregational Church, Charlotte, in 1807.

OLD DURAND HOMESTEAD, CHARLOTTE, VERMONT

Home of Alexandre and Elizabeth Whalley Durand, and where Francois Joseph Durand died

On February 23, 1839, Elizabeth Whalley Durand passed away. She was a loving wife, a devoted mother, a woman of sweet and gentle spirit, of sincere piety, and greatly beloved by her family and all who knew her.

The following is an extract from a letter written in 1893 by Milton Packard (401 d), a grandson of Alexandre and Elizabeth Durand. He speaks of her as "that dear and revered grandmother," and says that "for two years, at least, as I remember it, I lived almost constantly in the benign light of that dear grandmother's presence. It was when I was sitting on a stool at her feet that she taught me my first Sunday school lesson." He says, "how proud I was when I was allowed to carry from the sleigh into the church her foot-stove and place it for her in the great square pew."

Milton Durand (31 c) married Louisa Robbins (40) and their home was in Norwalk, Connecticut. He was said to be "a gentleman in the highest sense of the word, a student and a recluse, or exclusive, as one views it." The daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Durand Cowles (42 d) and her husband, George R. Cowles, occupied the old home after the death of her father and mother. Elizabeth Durand Cowles, at her death, left her beautiful house to the Congregational Church, in Norwalk, for a parsonage, plentifully furnished, even to bedding, china and table linen.

Nancy Durand Clarke (35 c), daughter of Alexandre Durand (4 D b), was a great reader, an accomplished scholar and a fine conversationalist. She was also a most dainty cook, as all the family remember. She received a yearly allowance from her brother, Milton Durand.

John Whalley (202 W a) and Anne Magee Whalley (203) came to America from the north of Ireland in 1774 or 1775, and settled in Norwalk, Connecticut. Their daughter Elizabeth was then about six years old. Anne Whalley joined the church in New Canaan, Connecticut, on profession of faith. John Whalley was drowned or killed in a naval engagement.

Eleanor Whalley Prindle (204 b), sister of Elizabeth Whalley Durand (28 W b).

NANCY ANN DURAND CLARKE, YEAR 1858

The following extract is from a letter of Henry Prindle (209 d), a member of the Legislature of Vermont:

"Now, as to Grandmother Prindle, why did we not put on paper some of the history which she gave with such pleasure to us children, while seated around that ever-to-be remembered fireplace, with its glorious pine-knot light? Those stories are now like a happy but vague memory, not clear enough to be a matter of history or record. Norwalk, Connecticut, was the burden of her thought when speaking of the early home. The quinces, chestnuts, peaches, and the everything there. Then how her husband (or intended) came up to Ferrisburg, Vermont, a year or two before her, cleaned a little spot, sowed apple seeds, which were up and growing nicely when they came; how they rode on horseback and were guided by marked trees."

They afterward removed to Charlotte, Vermont.

Annie Arnoux Haxtun (216 d), daughter of Gabriel A. Arnoux and Ann Kennett Arnoux and grand-daughter of Jane Whalley Kennett, was a well-known writer on genealogy. She was for eleven years the genealogical editor of the New York Evening Mail. She was prominent for years in charitable work in Brooklyn, and was one of the managers of the Home for Destitute Children and the Brooklyn Homeopathic Hospital. At her death, Mrs. Haxtun left her genealogical library to the Columbia University, New York.

Barnes—A parish in County Surrey.

Barnes Family—The earliest traces of the Barnes race are found in the southeast part of England, and indicate a Dano-Norman origin, probably coming to England at the time England was under Norman kings, 1000 to 1154.

Reference—"American Ancestry."

Records of the Church in Surrey, England, show that Barnes families lived there some five hundred years prior to the present century.

The first Barnes people who emigrated to America from England came from Surrey, Middlesex and Norfolk counties.

There were three Thomas Barnes that came from England to America, previous to 1638, known as Thomas Barnes of Hartford, Thomas Barnes of New Haven, and Thomas Barnes of Hingham, who were ancestors of three large branches of Barnes families in America.

Thomas Barnes (221 B a), of New Haven, was born about 1623, in England, and died at Middletown, Connecticut, in 1693. He served in the Pequot War, 1637, was at New Haven before 1639, removed to Middletown, Connecticut, soon after 1660, married about 1647.

Gersham Barnes (238 B c), youngest son of Maybee Barnes (230 B b), lived and died in North Haven, Connecticut. He was a very prominent man; was captain; served in the French and Indian War.

Asa Barnes (242 B d), Lanesborough, Massachusetts. "Asa Barnes, captain of a company in Colonel Paterson's regiment, which marched April 22, 1775, in response to the alarm of April 19, 1775, service seven days; also Colonel Benjamin Ruggles Woodbridge, Hampshire County Regiment; muster roll dated August 1, 1775; enlisted April 29, 1775, service three months and six days; also company return dated September 28, 1775; also pay-roll for fifteen days' service from July 13, 1777; marched to Manchester, on an alarm; also Fourth Company Colonel Simonds' Second (Berkshire county) Regiment. List of officers of Massachusetts militia, commissioned October 8, 1779; also First Company Colonel Chapin's Third Regiment; roll made out from October 15, 1779; discharged November 21, 1779; service one month eleven days, enlisted three months; company raised to reinforce Continental Army; also pay-roll for service from October 14 to October 21, 1780, seven days at the northward; also colonel; warrant to pay officers and men for service from October to November, 1781, dated June 15, 1785. He served in Captain Lewis' Company, Colonial Wars, as sentinel, near Lake George, in 1756."

Hezekiah Barnes, (245 e)—Hezekiah Barnes, private, Captain Asa Barnes' Company, Colonel Simonds' Berkshire County Regiment, marched to northward October 14, 1780; also sergeant Captain Timothy Read's Company, Colonel Asa Barnes' Regiment, marched from Lanesborough to Stillwater, October 13, 1781; also Captain David Wheeler's Company, Colonel Barnes' Regiment, marched from Lanesborough to Saratoga, October 29, 1781, on an alarm.

In the year 1810 Hezekiah Barnes held the office of Major-General in the Vermont Militia. He was a representative of Chittenden County in the years 1798–1809, 1816–1817.

Joseph Asa Barnes (276 f) left Vermont with his wife in 1833, in company with ten other persons, six of whom were children under twelve years of age. They traveled with a team the entire distance to Chicago, from Waitsfield, being six weeks on the road. Subsequently, they removed to Elk Grove, then occupied by the Indians. Of this company of Vermonters, Rush B. Miner of Arlington Heights (1899) is the only surviving member.

The Records of the Congregational Church, Lanesborough, Massachusetts, found in the “History of Berkshire County”—The records of the Church of Christ in Lanesborough, from the settlement of the church in that town in the year of Our Lord 1764—The Church of Christ was first gathered in the town of Lanesborough on Wednesday, the second of March, 1764, by the assistance of the Rev. Messrs. Samuel Hopkins, of Great Barrington, and Stephen West, of Stockbridge. The controversy over the building of a meeting house was aggravated by the fact that a portion of the town people were members of the Church of England, who were paying, as required by law, their assessments for public worship and supporting a Congregational minister, and waiting for an opportunity to have the services of a clergyman of an English church and build a church for themselves. March 10, 1766, the question of building a meeting house was put and passed in the negative. April 11, 1768, the sum of twenty shillings was levied on each right to build a meeting house, and Messrs. Nathaniel Williams, Miles Powell, Jedediah Hubbell, Ambrose Hall, and Joseph Keeler, Jr., were appointed a committee to build it. Its dimensions were ordered to be sixty feet in length, forty-three feet wide, and with twenty-seven foot posts. In October the dimensions were altered to fifty-eight feet in length, forty in width and twenty-five foot posts. It was also voted not to build a porch to the meeting house. On the second of November Peter Curtis, James Goodrich, Alvira Hill, Benjamin Foreman, William Bradley, Jacob Bacon, Daniel Harrington, Ambrose Hall, Asa Barnes (242 B d) and Abraham Bristol signed a call to reconsider the sight and all action concerning it. The majority of the gentlemen were perhaps of the Church of England, and the prospect of having regularly the services they loved, and building a church for themselves, led to this action.

Saint Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, Lanesborough, Massachusetts—By reference to the history of the Congregational Church, it will be seen that among the early settlers there were members of the Church of England, who did not wish to be taxed for the building of a meeting house, in which the services would be conducted after methods they could not approve. William Bradley, Joel Sherman, Asa Barnes (242 B d), Ashael Beach, Reuben Garlick, Abraham Bristol, William Jervies, and others, who thought that the Church of England was nearest the Apostolic model, were accustomed to assemble for divine worship in the house of Mr. Bradley, who said the service and a sermon. Soon afterward they met in a school house in the northeast corner of Mr. Bradley's farm, and previous to 1769 a small church had been erected on a plot of land a little to the south of the present Episcopal parsonage. The first recorded visit of a clergyman of the Church of England was in October, 1767, when the Rev. Samuel Andrews, of Wallingford, Connecticut, in a journey that he made "to the northward" at the request of his brethren of the Connecticut clergy, remained in the town for several days, and on October 2, 1767, presided at the organization of a parish, where Messrs. William Bradley and Joel Sherman were chosen wardens, and Abraham Bristol, clerk, and two days afterward baptized Hezekiah (245 e), son of Asa (242 B d), and Lois Yale Barnes (400 Y v) and Abel, Elinor, Elisha, Roger and Sybil Pettibone. The little flock in the wilderness was warmly commended by Mr. Andrews to the English Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, which in 1770 made it one of the four stations of a new mission, with its center at Great Barrington, under the pastoral care of the Rev. Gideon Bostwick, who had been ordained priest in London March 11, 1770, and actively took up his missionary work on his return in May. His first visit after his ordination was June 24, 1770, when he presided at the election of church officers. His extensive circuit allowed him to give but one Sunday in each month to Lanesborough. In September, 1770, he reported thirty families of the church there. His labor for twenty-three years was fruitful, as an inspection of his register, preserved among the archives of St. James church, of Great Barrington, will show. His salary, after some controversy in the town meetings, was paid from the tax levied for the support of a learned orthodox and settled minister, Mr. Collins receiving two-thirds and Mr. Bostwick one-third. In 1769 Mr. Bostwick went to England to receive holy orders and immediately upon his return he was made the rector of the church at Great Barrington, and at the same time was placed in charge of missions in other towns of Berkshire County and adjoining sections of Vermont, New York and Connecticut. He is said to have baptized 81 adults and 2,274 children during his twenty-three years of ministry. He died on the 13th of June, 1793.

The following is a copy of letter from the Rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Lanesborough, Massachusetts, March 24, 1893:

Dear Madam:—A letter from you was placed in my hands inquiring about Asa Barnes.

I have the military record of Colonel Barnes and the baptismal record of his children (who happened to be the first ones baptized in my church).

I could ascertain the town offices that he held, but they were only minor ones. He was born before the town was settled, and I have no means of knowing where he came from.

Yours truly,

(Signed) CHARLES J. PALMER.

Charlotte, Vermont, has its own place in the history of the Durand, Barnes and Yale families. Settled as it is in the foothills of the Green Mountains, it will always be deservedly dear, for it is full of precious memories, and has to-day a sweetness of its own because of hallowed remembrances.

"Charlotte was given its charter June 14, 1762. The town was organized March 13, 1787. Most of the settlers were from Connecticut and Massachusetts. In the year 1806 only ten towns in the state surpassed this; even Burlington did not equal it until 1824. During the war of 1812-1815 there were five military companies in town. In the year 1810 Hezekiah Barnes (245 e) held the office of major-general; Lyman Yale, captain; Joseph Barnes (253 B e), captain; Hezekiah Barnes, Jr. (257 f), lieutenant.

First postmaster, William Barnes, who received his appointment before 1804. He was followed by Hezekiah Barnes Jr. (257 f), who retained the office until 1825. From 1844 to 1848 Samuel H. Barnes, Hezekiah's son, held the office."

In Charlotte, on the 17th of March, 1787, Asa Barnes (242 B d), David Hubbell, and others were appointed a committee to set a stake for the meeting house. They were empowered to purchase land. The building was not commenced until April 17, 1791. The Congregational Church was organized January 3, 1792, with four members. Rev. D. O. Gillette was the first pastor, and remained such until 1799. Rev. Calvin Yale was ordained pastor October 15, 1817, and remained until March, 1833. Rev. Calvin Yale was a man of high attainments, was an accomplished linguist and classical scholar, and was especially proficient in Greek, Latin and French. His daughter, Mrs. C. C. King, and grand-daughter Mrs. Cora K. Adams, now reside in Chicago. Calvin Durand and Lois Barnes were married by the Rev. Calvin Yale in 1819.

The following list contains the names of nearly all the freemen in Charlotte in 1800, obtained from the town records:

Hezekiah Barnes (245 e).
Asa Barnes, Jr. (247 e).
Moses Yale (son of 391 u).
Joseph Barnes (253 B e).
Eliphalet Gillette.

Many of the children of the Durand, Barnes and Yale families were born in Charlotte. "Birthplace is said to be a secondary parentage and to transmit character."

The Charlotte Female Seminary was opened May 1, 1835; Jane A. Durand (57 d), at that time living in Clintonville, N. Y., was one of the first pupils. Kate Newell was also a pupil. She afterward became Mrs. Kate Newell Doggett, and was the founder of "The Fortnightly," a literary society in Chicago.

THE OLD BURYING GROUND, CHARLOTTE, VERMONT

THE ARMS AND CREST OF YALE

"Beautiful for situation" is the old burying ground in Charlotte, which has a place of its own in the family history, and as one gazes at the long rows of weather-beaten monuments and slabs of marble and slate, with the family inscriptions, they are reminded that

"As life goes on, the road grows strange;
The milestones into headstones change,—
'Neath every one a friend."

The Arms and Crest of Yale are said to be almost as ancient as heraldry itself. They were derived from the Fitz Gerald's and handed down through the direct male line, from Osborn Fitz Gerald (Osbovrn Wyddel). They are technically described as follows:

Arms: Erm (ermine) a Saltire Gu. (A red St. Andrew's cross.)

Crest: A mount (hillock) vert (green), thereon a boar az. (blue), within a net or. (gold), in the mouth an acorn slipped ppr. (natural colors).

The ermine represents the fur of a small white animal, a native of Armenia, and the marks on same are supposed to represent the tails of the animals, sewed to the fur for its enrichment. Ermine is an especial mark of dignity and has long been associated with royalty and the nobility.

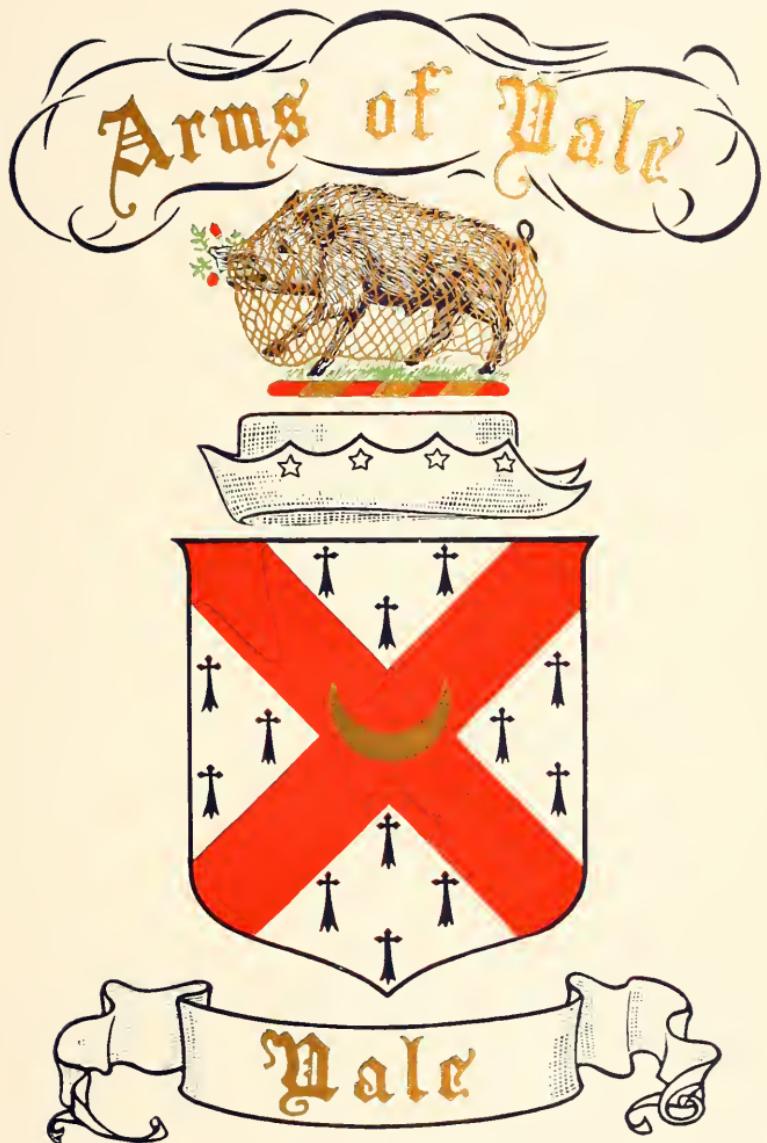

The St. Andrew's cross is a symbol of resolution, while the red denotes military fortitude and magnanimity.

The wild boar is a fierce combatant and may be considered to represent a valiant warrior. Blue may have a religious significance and possibly originated in the Crusades. The acorn slip signifies strength and antiquity; while the golden net indicates that a great warrior finally succumbed to pacific influences.

The chapeau denotes military authority.

Yale Name—The name of Yale is of Welsh derivation and was originally spelled "Ial," "Yal," "Yell," and comes from the district of Yale in Powys Fadog, Wales. The district of Yale, together with Bromfield, have formed, since the end of the thirteenth century, a lordship known as the lordship of Bromfield and Yale.

Surnames in Wales did not pass from father to son until the latter part of the sixteenth century, and were not definitely settled for a long time afterward. "Surnames were first used by men of rank in the eleventh century, and by the common people in the thirteenth century after Christ."

Early History—The Yales, although natives of Wales, were of Italian and Norman as well as British blood. The first ancestor recorded in pedigree, in the direct male line, is Dominus Otho (329 Y a), a nobleman from Florence, Italy (a Florentine), but he was not the only ancestor of Italian blood, as Cuneda, the head of the long line of British kings and princes, from whom the Yales are descended on the maternal side of the house, was, no doubt, partly of Roman parentage; through Alice de Montgomery (wife of 332 Y d) came the connection with the Normans.

As regards the personality and rank of these early ancestors, it can be properly stated that their political and social standing was on an equality with the great nobles and rulers of the times. There are but few, if any, families among the nobility of any land that can point to a more honorable and noble lineage than that of the Yales; descended as they are from the ancient kings and princes of Britain and from the greatest of all the Norman lords, Roger de Montgomery (grand-father of Alice, wife of 332 Y d), who was of the same family as William the Conqueror, as well as from Maurice Fitzgerald (332 Y d) the commander of the first expedition in the Norman Conquest of Ireland.

The antiquity of the Yale pedigree is eminent, dating back as it does, in the direct male line, to Dominus Otho (329 Y a), the Florentine noble, who came to England in 1057, nine years before the Norman Conquest; and on the maternal side to Cuneda, the first ruler of the Cymric nation, about the year 415 A. D. But few noble, or in fact royal, families can claim greater antiquity.

The Yales are connected with the house of Cuneda, and the succeeding kings and princes, through three distinct maternal lines, one of these maternal ancestors being Lowrie (wife of 340 Y p), daughter of Tudor Glyndwr, and niece of the memorable Owen Glyndwr. Her great-grand-father, Thomas ap Llewelyn, was also the ancestor of the five Tudor kings and queens of England, and King Edward VII as well. Another one of the Welsh princesses referred to was Nesta (wife of 337 Y r), the "Helen of Wales" who was not only great in herself and in her ancestry, but great in her posterity as well. The third maternal ancestor referred to was Gladys (wife of 330 Y b), daughter of the Prince of North Wales.

Thomas Yale (345 Y q)—The eldest son of Dr. David Yale (344 Y p) chancellor of Chester, lived at Chester, England, and at Plas Grono, the family estate at Wrexham, Wales. He married, about the year 1612, Ann Lloyd, daughter of George Lloyd, Bishop of Chester (1604–1615). Lord Bishop George Lloyd was born in the year 1560 at Carnarvonshire, Wales. He died August 1, 1615, aged fifty-five years, and was interred in Chester Cathedral. Dr. David Yale was one of the great men of his time and country. The following tribute is paid to him: "A man famous in himself and famous in his connections and descendants, not the least of whom was Elihu Yale (352 s), the founder of Yale College."

The estate of old Plas Grono was owned by Dr. David Yale about the year 1590. The "New Plas Grono" was built by Dr. David Yale, for his son, Thomas Yale, the father of David (346 r), Ann (348 r) and Thomas (347 Y r), the first Yales in America.

In the will of Dr. David Yale, dated August 15, 1625, he gives "to David Yale, Thomas Yale and Ann Yale, children of my eldest son, Thomas, late deceased, twenty pounds a year." Thomas Yale, who married Ann Lloyd, died August 27, 1619.

About the year 1625 Ann Lloyd Yale, the widow of Thomas Yale, married Theophilus Eaton, a wealthy merchant of London, who was the eldest son of the Rev. Richard Eaton, A. B., vicar of Great Budworth, Cheshire. Mr. Eaton was born about 1591, at Stony Stratford, Buckinghamshire, England. He, together with his wife, Ann, and his three step-children, David, Ann, and Thomas Yale, sailed for New England, in America, in the year 1637, in company with Rev John Davenport, a celebrated London clergyman. They landed at Boston, Massachusetts, and preferring to go into the wilderness, Eaton with a few men, after exploring the coast of the Sound, spent the following winter at a desirable place in that region. As soon as spring opened the company sailed from Boston and, in due time, they arrived at the place where Eaton had spent the winter. There (in April, 1638), under a large tree, on the Sabbath after their arrival, Davenport preached his first sermon in the wilderness. A day of fasting and prayer for direction was observed, and they formed a government, pledging themselves "to be governed in all things by the rules which the Scripture held forth to them." Such was the settlement of New Haven. They purchased from the Indians the right to the land (Quinipiak) and Eaton was elected the first governor of New Haven Colony in 1639, which office he held for more than twenty years, until his death, having been re-elected annually. Mr. Eaton was prominent in the organization of the New England Confederation in 1643. In 1655, assisted by Davenport, he drew up the so-called Connecticut "Blue Laws." Governor Eaton died at New Haven, January 7, 1658.

As every bit of information about this family is of general interest, it is well to state that Cotton Mather, in his life of Eaton, describes the wife of the Governor as "a prudent and pious widow, the daughter of the Bishop of Chester." Cotton Mather was undoubtedly personally well acquainted with the governor and his wife, hence his statement, as to the character and parentage of Ann Lloyd-Yale-Eaton, is of the highest authority.

It is claimed that Mrs. Eaton returned to England with her son, David Yale, in 1659. The date or place of her death has not been learned, but she probably died in London, where David resided until the year 1665.

David Yale (346 r) was born in 1613. He went with his mother and step-father to America, in 1637, and settled with them at New Haven in 1638. On January 4, 1640, in a list of the personal property possessed by the founders of New Haven, David Yale is said to have had a personal estate valued at three hundred pounds. The value of his estate was exceeded only by those of Mr. Eaton and his mother and brother.

David Yale at that time was unmarried, but he probably married about the year 1641. His wife's first name was Ursula, but her surname has not been learned. He no doubt removed to Boston, Massachusetts, about the year 1641, as there is nothing on record about him at New Haven later than March, 1641. It seems that he disposed of his landed estate in New Haven to his brother, and, at any rate, he must have gone to Boston before May, 1644, as the Boston registry shows the birth of Elizabeth, "the daughter of David and Ursula Yale," in May, 1644, and her death in August of the same year.

Mr. Yale was an active and thriving merchant in Boston, and August 23, 1645, purchased from Edward Bendall a house and garden, with lands appurtenant, said to be the most splendid in the city, on the site of the present Pemberton Square. He was also attorney for the Earl of Warwick in 1646.

Elihu Yale (352 s), son of David Yale, was born April 5, 1649, undoubtedly in or near Boston, according to some authorities on Pemberton Square. In the year 1652, when Elihu was three years of age, David Yale's family left Boston and went to England, where David had already gone, settled finally in London, where Elihu went to school, and lived during many interesting public events in English history. He was old enough to have seen Cromwell riding in the London streets with his guards, to have joined in the silent concourse at his funeral, and the shouts of joy at the Restoration. It was about 1670, when just passed his majority, that he emigrated to Madras, India, to make his fortune as a merchant. The details of his rise there are all wanting, but he probably began in the lowest grade of the service, as an apprentice, rising from that to the successive ranks from clerk to merchant. It appears that he spent twenty years of diligent service in India, but the first notice of him in print is in describing the solemnity of proclaiming, at Madras, in August, 1685, James II, King. He had reached, as appears by the record, the rank of second member of council, and less than two years later had become the senior or first member—only subordinate to the governor or president himself. Regular promotion was the principle of the service, and accordingly the directors in London, acting by their governor, Sir Josiah Child, the eminent writer on finance, sent out orders which were received at Madras on the 23rd of July, 1687, retiring President Gifford, and appointing Elihu Yale his successor. History tells of his rule while in power at Madras. In 1699, at the age of fifty-one, he sailed for England. Soon after his return he built in London a stately residence in Queen's Square, Great Ormond street, a little to the east of the present British Museum, the site of which is now probably occupied by a hospital built in later years. That his was a palatial establishment and filled with works of art and curiosities of great value, appears from the fire insurance records of the Sun fire office.

It was on May 11, 1711, that Mr. Jeremiah Dummer, the agent at London for the Province of Massachusetts Bay, as also later for

GOVERNOR ELIHU YALE

(FOUNDER OF YALE UNIVERSITY)

Reproduced from a photograph of his portrait in Yale University. This portrait was painted in June, 1717, by Enoch Zeeman, a Dutch painter, then settled in London, and was presented to the college by Dudley Long North, a great-grandson of Governor Elihu Yale, in 1789. The written name is an exact reproduction of his signature, in one of the church warden's books at Wrexham, Wales.

the Colony of Connecticut, first mentions in a letter to the Rev. James Pierpont of New Haven, the principal founder of the Collegiate School of Saybrook, that "Mr. Yale, formerly governor of Fort St. George, India, who has a prodigious estate," having no son, is sending to Connecticut for a relation to make him his heir; that is, to secure the descent of the landed property in Wales to one of the Yale name. "He told me lately," adds Dummer, "that he intended to bestow a charity upon some college in Oxford, under certain restrictions, which he mentioned, but I think he should rather do it to your college, seeing he is a New England, and I think, a Connecticut man. If, therefore, when his kinsman comes over, you will write him a proper letter on that subject, I will take care to press it home."

Reference—"Bacon's Historical Discourses."

Pierpont was not a man to neglect such an opportunity, and no doubt when young David Yale, a boy of fifteen, son of the oldest cousin of the governor, was sent over, in the year 1714, he carried a proper letter, describing the achievements and aspirations of the college at Saybrook.

About the same time Dummer was collecting from all his friends a gift of books for the college library, and when these (upwards of 700 volumes in all) were received, in 1714, between thirty and forty volumes (the most from any single donor except the collector himself) were marked as given by Governor Yale. The selection, which was presumably his own, was an uncommonly broad one; there were good representatives of theology, history, chronology, polite literature, classics, metaphysics, natural science, medicine, political science, commerce, agriculture, military science, and architecture — providing, we may say, some foundation for every one of the present departments in the university which was then so completely in embryo.

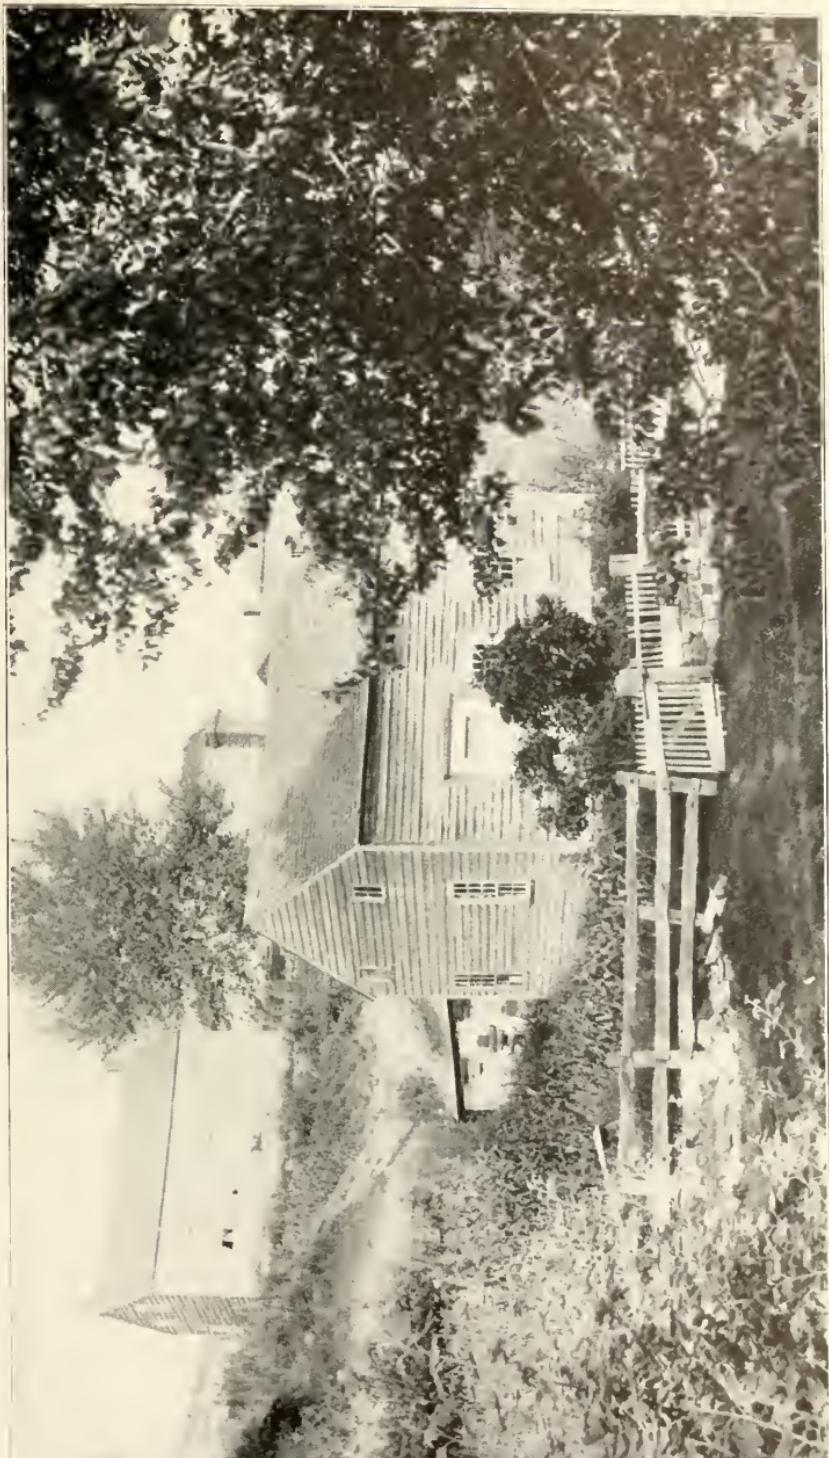

In October, 1716, the majority of the trustees of the Collegiate School voted to remove it from Saybrook to New Haven, and in the same month instruction was actually begun in temporary quarters there; and a year later the first college house was raised—that stupendous architectural monstrosity, which stood till the Revolution in front of the present South College. We may form a good idea of its appearance by imagining a wooden building the length of Durfee College, and of three quarters in height, but of only one half the width, and painted, moreover, a beautiful cerulean color.

CALVIN DURAND, YEAR 1849

THE FIRST HOME OF CALVIN DURAND, IN CLINTONVILLE, N. Y.

The picture was taken thirty-eight years after his moving to the farm

THE FARM OF CALVIN DURAND, NEAR CLINTONVILLE, N. Y.

The home after the year 1852. From a near hill to the east can be seen Lake Champlain and the Green Mountains of Vermont, and a little way to the west are the Adirondacks. Here in the summer of each year were held happy family reunions, the children with their families coming from their homes in the west.

The trustees were utterly without resources to finish so elegant a building; and in their extremity one good friend of the college, Mr. Cotton Mather, of Boston, was appealed to. On the fourteenth of January, 1718, he wrote to Governor Yale a remarkable letter, in which he praised skillfully the governor's well-known charity, and solicited his favor toward the college at New Haven. "Sir," said he, "though you have felicities in your family, which I pray, God continue and multiply, yet certainly, if what is forming at New Haven might wear the name of Yale College, it would be better than a name of sons and daughters. And your munificence might easily obtain for you a commemoration and perpetuation of your valuable name, which would indeed be much better than an Egyptian pyramid."

Mr. Dummer was endeavoring to get a present from Mr. Yale for finishing the college, and his interviews, seconded by such letters as Mather's, resulted in what was really for those times a munificent gift; and the giver remained for a full century the largest individual donor to the college funds, until the receipt of $10,000 in 1837 from the estate of Dr. Alfred E. Perkins, for the library.

The reason for giving the numerous details as to Elihu Yale and his gifts, is on account of their general interest to those of the family, related to him, who are alumni or students of Yale University.

On Saturday, July 8, 1721, the Weekly Journal and British Gazetteer, of London, announced that "Elihu Yale, Esq., commonly called Governor Yale, a gentleman eminently known for his extensive charity, lies at the point of death at his house in Queen's Square, Great Ormond street." He died before the close of that day, aged seventy-two years three months and three days.

He was buried in the churchyard of the famous Wrexham church, in Wales. On his tomb is found this quaint epitaph:

"Born in America, in Europe bred,
In Africa travell'd and in Asia wed,
Where long he liv'd and thriv'd; in London dead.
Much good, some ill, he did; so hope all's even,
And that his soul thro' mercy's gone to heaven.
You that survive and read this tale take care,
For this most certain exit to prepare,
Where blest in peace, the actions of the just Smell sweet, and blossom in the silent dust."

Thomas Yale (347 Y^r) married Mary Turner, daughter of Captain Nathaniel Turner, New Haven, Connecticut, 1645. Captain Turner was of Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1630, and removed to New Haven in 1638, and was lost at sea with all his crew, January, 1646.

Thomas Yale came to America in 1637, with his step-father, Governor Eaton, and settled in New Haven as a merchant in 1638. He later became one of the principal men in the colony, a signer of the Plantation Covenant of New Haven, and filled with honor many offices of trust, with credit to himself, and to the satisfaction of his friends and fellow colonists.

Calvin Durand (33 D^c), with his wife, Lois Barnes Durand (290 B^f), and their two little children, Jane Ann and John Milton Durand, moved from Charlotte, Vermont, to Clintonville, New York, which is situated on the Au Sable River, about twelve miles from Lake Champlain. Into their home, in Clintonville, came other children (Henry C., Charles E., Joseph B., Calvin, Jr., and two who died in infancy). Clintonville deserves a large place in memory, for it was not only the home of Calvin and Lois Barnes Durand, but it was in Clintonville that their daughter married and lived, and there that her children were born. And from there their sons started out at different periods to make their homes in the West.

In 1852 Calvin Durand moved from the village onto his farm, which is beautifully situated about half a mile from the town. Before this, his business had been mercantile and contract work. Mr. Durand was captain of the Clintonville militia. It was in this home that Mr. Durand and his wife spent the rest of their lives. He was a man strong in character and of sincere Christian faith. Their remains are resting in the old home burying ground in Charlotte, Vermont.

The "Wayside Spring," which is near the side of the road that leads from Clintonville to Keeseville should be held in fond remembrance by all who have been refreshed by drinking of its cold, pure water, always fresh from its mountain home, and all should say of this "Wayside Spring:"

"Dear dweller by the dusty way,
The tribute of our hearts to-day is thine."

Jane Ann Durand (57 d), the first child of Calvin and Lois Barnes Durand, was born in Charlotte, Vermont.

HENRY C. DURAND DRINKING AT THE "WAYSIDE SPRING"
On the road between Clintonville and Keeseville, N. Y.

She was about six years old when with her parents she came from Charlotte, Vermont, to Clintonville, New York.

In 1836 she attended the Charlotte Female Seminary, where, by her gentleness and unselfish thought for others, she won many friends.

At the age of eighteen she married Rensselaer Bailey, of Clintonville. There they made their home until 1851, when they came west, going first to Milwaukee and then by boat to Chicago, stopping at the old Tremont House.

Their first home was on Jefferson street between Randolph and Washington streets, which was then a residential part of the city.

Mrs. Bailey was one of the early members of the Third Presbyterian Church, which was situated on Union street, between Randolph and Washington streets.

From Jefferson street they moved, in 1856, to Warren avenue, near Robey street. Their house was said to be the first brick house built west of Union Park. Some time after the death of Mr. Bailey, which occurred in 1862, Mrs. Bailey and her daughter moved to Washington boulevard, near Wood street, where she lived until the marriage of her daughter Frances, when she went with her daughter to Milwaukee. In her latter years Mrs. Bailey was very frail, but her illness was borne with Christian resignation. All through her life she was strong in character and gentle in spirit. On March 13, 1870, she peacefully entered into the dwelling place of God, and a beautiful life passed away from the home. In the family circles she was beloved, and her influence will continue to live on through the years.

Rensselaer Bailey (66), who married Jane A. Durand, left his home in Clintonville, New York, March 1849, for California (another world it seemed to the family circle he left). He sailed from New York on the steamship Falcon, March 8, 1849, reached New Orleans March 19, Panama May 20, and San Francisco August 30, 1849.

Mr. Bailey's letters, written in California, and his "Log Book" are still preserved. He returned to his home in Clintonville, New York, by way of Cape Horn, in November, 1850, having been quite successful. In April, 1851, he came to Chicago and started in the wholesale grocery business on Market street, Number 4 Lind's Block.

The article "To California in 1849," written by Julius H. Pratt in the Century Magazine of April, 1891, is one of interest. Mr. Bailey was a fellow passenger of Mr. Pratt on the ship Humboldt, which left Panama May 20th, and mention is made in Mr. Bailey's "Log Book" of Mr. Pratt and others who are referred to in the article. In a letter, dated November, 1849, from the South American fork of the Sacramento River, Mr. Bailey says: "We expect to have a governor for the state of California, the constitution is made out, and the election takes place on Tuesday next, to elect officers to the state and adopt the constitution." Some of the word pictures and accumulation of facts of life in California at that time, as given in his letters, are most thrilling. Mr. Bailey died on August 6, 1862.

JANE DURAND BAILEY, YEAR 1849

Henry Martyn Hooker (70) married Eliza J. Bailey in 1859. He came from Enfield, Massachusetts, in 1855, and started in the drug business with his brother, at 56 West Randolph street, Chicago, the firm being F. & H. M. Hooker. Later Mr. H. M. Hooker left the drug business to his brother and engaged in the wholesale paint and glass business, at 59 West Randolph street. The H. M. Hooker Company was formed later. Mr. Hooker's many benevolent gifts, whether large or small, are made in a very unostentatious way.

John M. Durand (58 d) was the first of the sons to leave the home in Clintonville, going, in 1846, to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he was employed as clerk for Bradley & Metcalf. After remaining a year he was offered a partnership, but, not liking the boot and shoe business, he did not accept. He afterward became engaged in the wholesale grocery business, the firm being Durand & Lawrence.

In a letter written January 25, 1847, from Milwaukee, to his sister, Mrs. Jane Durand Bailey, who was then living in Clintonville, he says: "I was quite sick about two weeks ago, and I thought of my mother during this short sickness, for there is nobody that can care for a child when sick like a mother. Tell mother that I have attended church every Sunday with one or two exceptions." He told of having a letter from Joseph E. Gary from Springfield, Missouri. (The Joseph E. Gary referred to was the late Judge Gary, of Chicago, Illinois.)

In 1848 he married Almira Wood Stoddard (84), of Milwaukee. Three children came into the home, Charles Ward, Ella Frances and John M., Jr.

Mr. Durand was greatly prospered in business. In 1867 he retired from active business and spent many years with his family traveling abroad, going to Egypt in 1870.

JOHN MILTON DURAND, YEAR 1895

YEAR 1867

He was in Paris when the Franco-Prussian War broke out and Emperor Napoleon III was taken prisoner. Mr. Durand thought of leaving Paris, but the American ambassador, Mr. Washburne, who was a warm friend, prevailed upon him to remain. He was only able to communicate with his wife, who was in Geneva (Switzerland), by letters sent out of Paris by General Burnside in balloons.

Mr. Durand remained the five months until the siege was lifted, and his family, who came from Geneva, were among the first to enter Paris, where all were at the time of the Commune, March 18, 1871. The fighting became so serious that he and his family, although they had an American flag, had to remain for two days in the cellar on account of the cannon-balls falling and setting fire to the houses around them; the excitement was intense and the peril great, for no one knew what would happen next. Thus they remained until the Commune was defeated, May 28, 1871.

The setting on fire of the Tuileries and many other palaces, and the terrible deeds committed by the communists, when they saw that they would be beaten, were scenes leaving vivid memories of horror and peril.

Mr. Durand received a complimentary appointment as special minister to Italy, and he went to Rome with his family. In the year 1872 he returned to America and became a member of the firm of Durand Brothers in Chicago. He was a Mason, a member of the Union League Club, of New York City, a member of the Chicago Club, the Washington Park Club, and an active member of the Chicago Commercial Club.

In 1901 Mr. Durand, with his wife and son, Charles Ward Durand, went to Pasadena, California, and there built a beautiful home, at 275 Arlington Drive, where he lived until his death, November 13, 1907. His wife and son, Charles, are now living in the home.

Henry Clay Durand (60 d) left his home in Clintonville, September, 1850. He went to Milwaukee, and was clerk in the grocery house of Durand & Lawrence. In May, 1851, he went to Chicago, and was given an interest in the wholesale grocery business which in April, 1851, had been started by Rensselaer Bailey (66), his brother-in-law, on Market street, No. 4 Lind's Block, the firm being Bailey & Durand. From this pioneer firm evolved the firms, Durand Brothers and Durand Brothers & Powers. After this there were other changes, the last being Durand & Kasper Company.

Henry C. Durand married Annie W. Burdsal (104). They lived in Chicago until 1872, when they removed to Lake Forest, Illinois. Mr. Durand was president of the board of trustees of the Lake Forest University and during his life made the gifts of the University Art Institute building, Alice Home Hospital, Annie Durand Cottage (a dormitory for boys of the academy), and Lois Durand Hall, a home for the young women of the college.

Henry C. Durand died suddenly of apoplexy at the Moraine Hotel, Highland Park, Illinois, where he had gone from his residence in Lake Forest, Illinois, to remain until his new house in Lake Forest, upon which work had been just begun, was completed.

Upon request, the following was contributed by the writer to the Stentor, the Lake Forest College paper:

“LOIS DURAND HALL”

This building was given and named by Mr. Henry C. Durand, in honor of his mother, Lois Barnes Durand, who was born July 6, 1799, in Charlotte, Vermont. She was the daughter of Joseph and Lucretia Barnes, and grand-daughter of Colonel Asa Barnes, a Revolutionary soldier, and Lois Yale Barnes, who was of the same family as Elihu Yale, a founder of Yale College. On March 3, 1819, she was married, in Charlotte, Vermont, to Calvin Durand, a grandson of François Joseph Durand, of Besançon, France.

After living in Charlotte for a few years they left the home by the Green Mountains, crossed Lake Champlain, and made their home by the foothills of the Adirondacks, in Clintonville, N. Y.

In her early youth she became a member of the Congregational Church. Her religion was so full of joy that it made her character strong but gentle and tender. She was an earnest student of the Bible, and her home was made beautiful by her steadfast and unostentatious piety and habitual cheerfulness.

Into this home, came two daughters and six sons (one of the daughters and one of the sons died in infancy). To her family she gave her heart's devotion. “Her children arise up and call her blessed,” and her grand-children love to think “of the unfeigned faith which dwelt in Grandmother Lois.”

HENRY CLAY DURAND, YEAR 1900

While her life was not always one of ease, yet she accepted her work cheerfully, and was happy in doing not only for her own home, but for other homes, as many would testify.

In after years, when her children were located in Milwaukee and Chicago, she, with her husband, made frequent visits to their homes, the last visit being in 1860, when they both entered so heartily into the spirit of the convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln for President. Not long after this visit she became ill. On Sabbath morning, at sunrise, May 26, 1861, after saying "good morning" to the members of her family, and speaking a word of comfort to each one, she peacefully "entered into rest," and her going away "opened wider the gates" to the land that is better.

Her remains are resting in Charlotte, Vermont. On the monument are the words of the hymn she loved to sing, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

"This song to us descendeth;
The Spirit, who in her did sing,
To us His music lendeth.
We raise it high, we send it on,
The song that never endeth!"

Such a life, though long ago ended here, touches the heart, and every thought of her, by those who knew her best, is a summons to nobler living.

One vivid memory, which is cherished by the family circle, is of her own room with the door so often closed when she went aside for prayer. Her children came to understand her source of strength and peace, and why she could "sing over the humblest service as though it was the highest joy."

This is but a meager sketch of the mother whose name her son, Henry C. Durand, wished to honor by giving it to the home for the young women of Lake Forest College. It is most fitting, for she loved young people.

"In her tongue is the law of kindness." She would gladly speak a word of cheer and encouragement that would be a benediction to each young woman as she comes in and as she goes out of Lois Durand Hall.

Charles E. Durand (61 d) went from his home in Clintonville to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1852, and was for a time clerk for Durand & Lawrence. In 1853 he removed to Chicago and was a clerk for Bailey & Durand until 1856. Afterward he was a member of the Durand Brothers, which was founded in 1856. In 1861 he from that firm and started in the wholesale grocery business. Hiram Hyde (who also came from Clintonville), the firm being Durand & Hyde. Later this firm, after the great Chicago fire, was changed to Durand Brothers, the firm consisting of Charles E. Durand and Joseph B. Durand. He married Anna Clarence Hill, December 1, 1862, Burlington, Vermont. Mr. C. E. Durand resided in Lake Forest for many years. He was the first of the five brothers to pass away. His death occurred April 9, 1894.

Joseph B. Durand (62 d) in 1857 came from his boyhood home in Clintonville to Milwaukee, and was clerk for Durand & Lawrence. Later he was one of the firm of J. M. Durand & Company. After the great Chicago fire of 1871 he moved his business to Chicago and joined his brother, Charles E. Durand, the firm being Durand Brothers. Upon the retirement of C. E. Durand (61 d) the firm name was changed to J. B. Durand & Co. When, in 1903, he retired from active business, his interest was purchased by his son and the sugar business continued under the name S. S. Durand & Co. In 1866 he married Helen Florence Sloan, daughter of Hon. A. Scott Sloan, of Beaver Dam, Wisconsin. Six children came into their home.

He removed with his family from Milwaukee to Lake Forest, Illinois, in 1877. The youngest of the children, "Little Paul," died in 1885. Florence Sloan Durand died September 24, 1899.

On June 11, 1903, Joseph Barnes Durand was married to May Louise Burt (124) at Gardiner, Maine. Their home is now in Pasadena, California.

Calvin Durand, Jr. (63 d) was the last of the five brothers to leave the old home in Clintonville, and with his going the father and mother were left alone.

It was in 1860 that he came to Chicago and clerked in his brother's store. On July 21, 1862, at the age of twenty-two years, he enlisted in the Chicago Board of Trade Battery, which joined the "Army of the Cumberland," and was with it in its great battles. The following is an extract from one of Mr. Durand's letters, dated March 8, 1863, Murfreesboro, Tennessee:

"I really wish myself that this wicked Rebellion might soon be crushed and put down so that I could return to my kind friends again, but as much as I dislike the service, I hate Rebellion worse and desire to use the little strength I have in crushing it and it cannot be crushed any too soon for me. I believe that, although the end can be seen only through a heavy mist, that the veil will soon be lifted and that the people of this country are destined to be happier, freer and more peaceful than ever before, because it will have freedom for its foundation.

"God is afflicting us sorely, but I believe only to refine us and make us purer and better as a people."

In July, 1864, he was taken prisoner by the Confederates, near Atlanta, Georgia.

The following letter is of interest:

Headquarters for Chicago Board of Trade Battery,
Near Atlanta, Georgia, August 11, 1864.

H. C. DURAND, Esq.

Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of your favor of the 1st inst., the same coming to hand yesterday P. M. In reply I would say that I have been unable to learn anything in relation to where "Cam" (Calvin) was taken, after capture, but suppose to Atlanta and thence to Andersonville or Americus, in this state, where there are said to be about thirty thousand of our men.

There is no regular channel for communication with these men at this point, but I think there is by the way of Old Point Comfort, Virginia, by which route and flag of truce I heard from one of my battery boys that was captured previous to "Cam."

There is no flag of truce correspondence at this point. I have thought that when we went upon another raid to the rear of Atlanta, or at some railroad station in the enemy's lines, I might be able to forward some letters and money to him, although the conveyance might not be altogether reliable. Be assured that I will not let an opportunity to help him pass by unimproved.

If you are drafted I will give you a chance in the Battery.

We are still thundering away at the gates of Atlanta, but the rebels are getting so that they don't drive worth a cent. We are getting up some siege guns that will soon demolish the town and make it pretty warm for them, but they are strongly fortified and defend them very stubbornly.

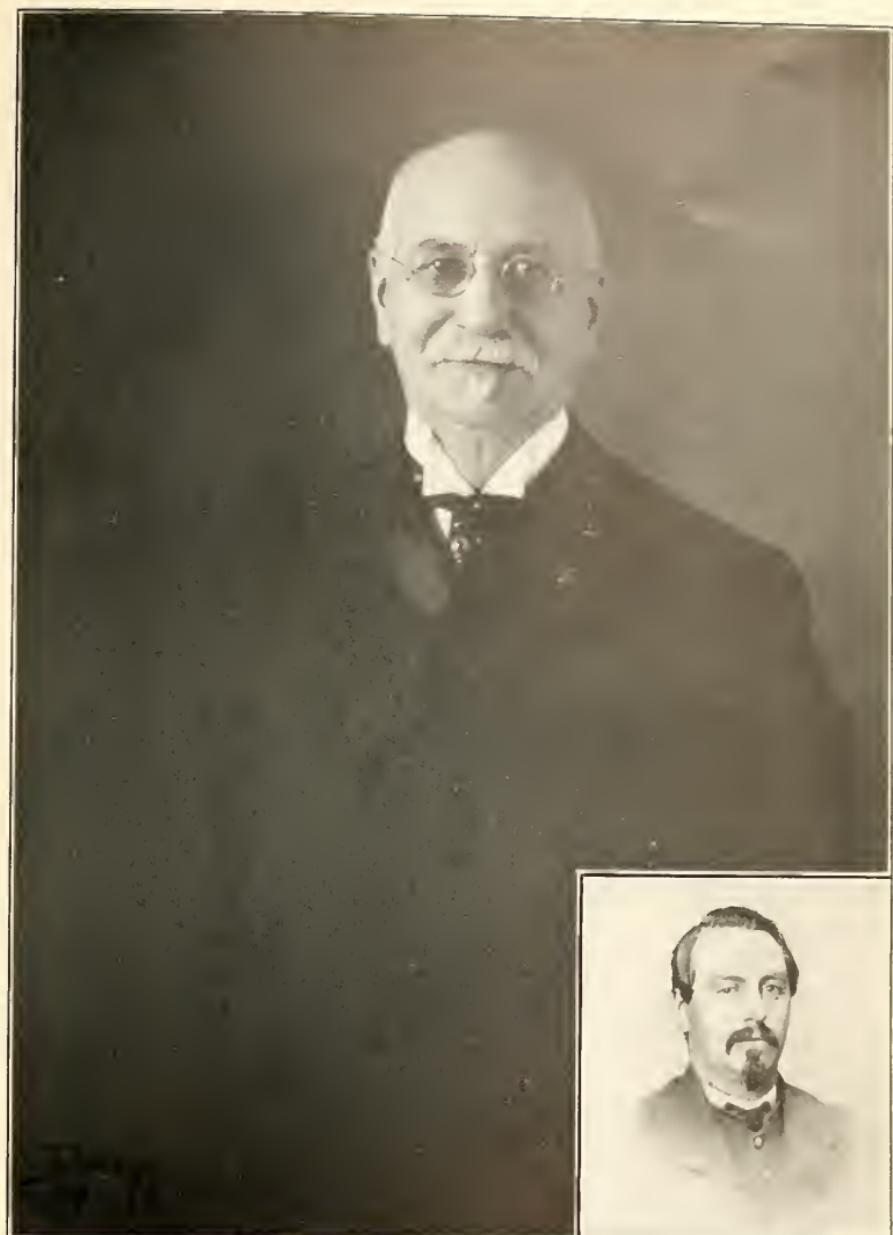

If we had a handsome reinforcement we could make short work of this campaign and make it the last campaign in this department. If we don't get them, it may wear along for some time, but you can rest assured that this army don't let go its hold here very easily. The enemy is now known to be largely reinforced by the militia of various states, and now number equal to us. Although this militia is not like veteran troops, still behind the fortification that they have they will make a pretty good fight.

With kind regards for your firm and families,

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. I. ROBINSON,

First Lieut. Commander.

Mr. Durand was taken to Andersonville, where he remained three months; thence to Charleston for six weeks. At Charleston, he has told us, they were "visited almost daily by Sisters of Charity, the only ladies who ever entered any of the prisons. They came as angels of mercy, bringing with them such little delicacies and medicine for the sick as they could obtain. Their very presence was a tonic to us all, and we could only say of them, 'God bless the Sisters of Charity.'"

From Charleston he was taken to Florence, South Carolina, was there three months, and then to Libby Prison, where he was kept two weeks, and then exchanged. His treatment in each of these prisons was cruel and brutal to the extreme. He says that history is unable to record the brutal treatment accorded to the prisoners in those southern prison pens.

At the close of the war he was discharged in Chicago. Soon after he was admitted into the firm of Durand Brothers & Powers, the present firm name being Durand & Kasper Company.

In 1867 he married Sarah Gould Downs (who was a descendant of Governor Bradford). They removed from Chicago to Lake Forest in 1875. There are six children in the home. Mr. Durand has lately given to the Lake Forest University the building known as the Calvin Durand Commons.

Calvin Durand died, October 31, 1911, at his home in Lake Forest, Illinois.

Thus the story of the families is written in part, and we believe with Hon. Edward Everett, that "The sacred tie of family, which reaching backward and forward binds the generations of men together, and draws out the plaintive music of their being from the solemn alternation of cradle and grave."

"Forefather, parent, child, posterity, native land; these all teach us, not blindly to worship but duly to honor the past, to study lessons of experience, to scan the high counsels of man in his great associations."

Not all the story has begun is told. [115]

*This life is not all
It is an "unfinished
